Country's highest magistrate setting lowest standard

THE HIGHEST MAGISTRATE IN THE COUNTRY, JUDGE JESUS M. VELAZQUEZ, has set a low standard for the prosecution of cases involving the death penalty. In a recent decision, Judge Velazquez ruled that the prosecution must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused is guilty of the crime.

This decision has been widely criticized by human rights groups, who argue that it sets a dangerous precedent for the prosecution of cases involving the death penalty. They argue that the prosecution should be required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused is guilty of the crime, and that the death penalty should only be imposed in the most serious cases.

Hungarian president quits over plagiarism

Budapest — Hungary's president, Ferenc Gyurcsány, has resigned after it was revealed that he had plagiarized parts of his speech during a campaign event. Gyurcsány, who was the leader of the center-right Fidesz party, had been elected president in a controversial election.

Gyurcsány's resignation came after a video of his speech was leaked, showing that he had copied large portions of it from other sources. The scandal led to a loss of confidence in Gyurcsány and his party.

The resignation of Gyurcsány is seen as a significant event in Hungarian politics. It has raised questions about the integrity of the election process and the role of the media in holding leaders accountable.

Washington — The Supreme Court has upheld a lower court ruling that allows police to conduct strip searches of inmates in jail. The decision is seen as a victory for law enforcement agencies, but it has drawn criticism from civil liberties groups.

The Supreme Court's decision was based on the argument that strip searches are necessary for the security of the jail. The court said that the searches are not punitive and are therefore allowed under the Constitution.

Civil liberties groups argue that strip searches are degrading and violate the rights of inmates. They say that the searches should be limited to situations where there is a clear and present danger to the jail's security.
